ΔΙΑΓΩΝΙΣΜΑ ΑΓΓΛΙΚΩΝ

ΒΙΒΛΙΟ ΕΡΩΤΗΣΕΩΝ

(2006)

Διάρκεια 2 ωρες
Part 1. Writing in Greek

Διαβάστε προσεχτικά το παρακάτω αγγλικό κείμενο καθώς και τις οδηγίες που ακολουθούν και απαντήστε στα ελληνικά στις γραμμές που υπάρχουν στο φύλλο σας.

The famous American leader Martin Luther King said he had a dream – a vision for the future – in which blacks and whites would live together in harmony. Unfortunately, he was killed before he could see his dream become reality.

Ποιο είναι το δικό σου όραμα για το μέλλον της ανθρωπότητας; Πώς μπορεί το σχολείο να βοηθήσει τα παιδιά, ώστε να γίνει αυτό το όνειρο πραγματικότητα;

Part 2. English Composition

Στις γραμμές που υπάρχουν στην πίσω σελίδα του φύλλου σας, γράψτε μια έκθεση στα αγγλικά σύμφωνα με τις οδηγίες που ακολουθούν.

Congratulations! Something you have made has just won first prize in a competition. Write a composition about the competition which includes answers to the following:

1) What kind of a competition was it?
2) Describe what you made.

Gap-Filling #1

One thing you may not notice about Anatolia College is _______ trees. There are a lot of them, and there are quite a few different kinds of them, too. Some are green all year long, and others _______ their _______ every fall. When the school moved to where it is now more than 70 years ago, there _______ a single tree here. The land was just fields. You might have seen grass and sheep and goats, _______ no trees (goats love to eat young trees).

So how did the trees get here? The answer is simple: Anatolia students planted them. Each student had to plant _______ one tree every year. An American woman named Elsie White told them what kinds to plant and _______ to plant them. Now there is no room to plant new trees at Anatolia, but some Anatolia students helped plant trees in the forest above the city when it burned almost ten years _______.

The trees at Anatolia make the air smell sweet and fresh, but they have also made it hard to see the city of Thessaloniki. You _______ the whole city spread out below you, but now the trees are in the way. You can still see some of the city through the trees, but you have to go to the top of Macedonia Hall for a _______ good view.

Reading #1

“I never let school stop me from getting an education,” wrote the American writer Mark Twain. He knew what he was talking about. He himself left school when he was twelve years old. He went to work in a printing shop, where books and newspapers were published (εκδόθηκαν). He was the boy who put the letters and words in the right order so that they could be printed, and he read more things at the printer’s shop than the children he had left behind read at their desks in school.

Some schools are different from the ones you may be used to. One of these is an English school named Summerhill. It was started in 1921 by a man named A.S. Neill and is still going strong. Neill wrote that “Most of the work that children do in school is a waste of time and energy. They need time to play and play and play. Too many schools try to put old heads on young shoulders.” So students at Summerhill choose how to spend their own time. There are good teachers and lots of things to do and ways to learn, but students either choose to do them or not, as they like. They decide what, when, and how to learn. Neill believed that “Every moment of a healthy child’s life is a working moment. A child has no time to sit down and be lazy. A child needs to live his own life – not the life that his parents think he should live, nor the life that his teachers think is best for him.”

Many parents, especially in the United States, are deciding not to send their children to school at all. They may not approve of the way things are taught in school or the way other students dress or act. So they teach their children themselves at home, or find someone to teach them, using textbooks from a list given by the government. In all parts of the U.S., all children have either to go to school or be taught at home up to a certain age. They must also learn the same things, but how children are taught at home is the decision of their parents. It often happens that children who are taught at home learn faster than those who go to school. They often do more in three hours of study at home than in six hours at school. With the rest of their time, they can play, read, make things, draw, surf the Internet, or even do their “homework!”
101. “I never let school stop me from getting an education” (line 1) means…

A) that Mark Twain never had much education.
B) that Mark Twain learned more outside of school than in.
C) that Mark Twain did not read much when he was a boy.
D) that Mark Twain needed to earn money when he was in school.

102. The phrase “too many schools try to put old heads on young shoulders” (line 11) means…

A) that younger children need to try hard to learn from their teachers.
B) that teachers should understand that children need to learn like children.
C) that not all children are old enough to do well in school.
D) that schools are not the best place for children to learn.

103. According to the third paragraph of the text (Σύμφωνα με την τρίτη παράγραφο), which one is true of children who are taught at home?

A) They can learn whatever they want to.
B) They have to teach themselves from books and computers.
C) Their parents do not approve of how their children behave in school.
D) They have to learn what children who go to school learn.

104. Why is the word “homework” (line 28) in quotation marks (εισαγωγικά)?

A) Because children taught at home don’t have to do homework
B) Because all the learning of a child taught at home is done at home.
C) Because some parents don’t approve of giving their children homework
D) Because surfing the Internet is not really homework

105. Each paragraph shows…

A) that learning can happen in different ways.
B) that schools are not useful for most children.
C) that people who do not go to school learn more than those who do.
D) that you can learn more by playing than by studying.
On a small group of islands in the Pacific Ocean lived some people called the Mariori. They lived simple lives in small villages close to the coast. They collected wild plants and caught fish to eat. Because food was difficult to find they shared everything they could with each other, and in that way they looked after each other. On hot summer nights thousands of stars lit up the sky, and everyone sat together telling stories and singing songs. Often the old people told these stories to teach the younger ones about the right way to live. One night an old lady began:

"Once upon a time there was a family with five brothers. They were strong and brave and they became excellent fishermen. Every day when they went out in their boats, they brought back so many fish that the whole village had food for several days. Their little sister, who was the only girl in their family, was very proud of them.

After a while, however, the other young men in the village stopped trying to catch fish themselves. They realized that the brothers caught enough for everyone, so they felt there was no reason for them to work so hard. They began to relax and to wait for the brothers' return each afternoon. Then they would go down to the beach to collect fish from the brothers’ full nets for their own families. When they realized what was happening, the brothers became angry.

"Why should we do all the work?" they complained to each other. And so they made a plan.

The next day they told their sister to ask each man from the village who took a fish from their nets to give her something for it. A few people agreed, and gave her fruit or vegetables or shells for the fish. Most people refused, however. This was a land without money, where people had always shared. When the brothers realized that their plan was not working, they threw all their fish onto the rocks. The sea birds ate some, but there were many left, and the smell of the dead fish in the hot sun was terrible.

The god of the sea saw that the brothers had wasted the fish, and now he became angry. When the brothers went out to sea the next day he made a great storm strike and they were never seen again. Without the brothers to do their fishing for them, the men who were left behind had to work twice as hard and for twice as long to fill their nets each day."

When the old lady finished her story there was silence. Then a little child spoke.

"What about the sister? What happened to her?"

"Well," said the old lady, "She sat alone on the shore waiting for her brothers to return, and would not eat or speak to the people of the village again. The sea god felt sorry for her, and changed her into a dolphin. So, when you see a friendly dolphin swimming close to your boat, it might be the little sister still looking for her lost brothers. Perhaps one day she will find them, changed as she was, and they will fish together in the deep blue sea."
